[NARRATIVE LOG]

SYS> Genesis lock completes with a dry chime, and the shrine air turns still enough for y hear rain tapping through the cracked roof.

NAR> Cold prayer-stone presses through your boots. Incense ash has pooled in the tile gro and pale mist keeps breathing in through the split gate ahead.

NAR> Wardline Calculus does not announce itself with a voice. It settles across your thou quietly outlining stress fractures in the altar, the gate, and the room around you.

NAR> A faint sigil flashes across your palm when your pulse kicks up, then vanishes befor can decide whether it felt like a blessing or a claim.

NAR> There is no enemy in motion, but the chamber does not feel empty. Someone bled here recently, and the dark drag mark near the prayer rail ends just outside your line of
